Road To Dawn = Menjelang Subuh : The Story of Sun Yat Sen in Penang /
(Producer) Wang Jiangcheng
China: Shenzhen Film Production & Pearl River Film Co Ltd., 2016
DVD Video – Newly reissued and unabridged DVD
Includes Audio : Mandarin ; Subtitles: Chinese, English & Malay
16:9 Ratio – Widescreen ; 120mins with Special features
$ 25.00 / DVD
104gm.

The movie Road to Dawn (2007) is based on the story of Dr Sun Yat Sen as a revolutionary in Penang, Malaysia, in the year 1910. Although it incorporates fictional elements, the movie is based on historical events. Directed by Hong Kong filmmaker, Derek Chiu, the film depicts an episode in Sun Yat-sen's revolutionary life, when he sought refuge in Penang from July to December 1910. After his ninth failed attempt to stage a revolution in China, Dr. Sun Yat Sen alias Sun Wen (Winston Chao) is once more a political exile with a price on his head. Turned away from Japan, he sails to the Nanyang.

In the tropical island of Penang, Dr Sun continues to raise funds for the Chinese Revolution while staying at the luxurious home of Penang businessman Xu Boheng (Wang JianCheng). Xu's beautiful daughter, Xu Dang Rong (Lee Sin Chet) is a feisty Nyonya lady. Her life changes when she meets Dr. Sun at the grand birthday celebration for her mother Mrs. Xu (Vickey Liu). Xu Dan Rong's father is forcing her to marry the son of his British business friend, although she really loves Lou Zhaoling (Zhao Zheng). Unknown to her, Lou is a Qing secret agent who has received an order to kill Dr. Sun. Meanwhile, Dr. Sun's second wife, Chen Cui Fen (Wu Yue) has just arrived to join him. She tries to thwart the assassin...

$ 72.00 / HB
1.27kg.

Street food in Penang is fast and cheap. Flavours are bold, presentation often forgotten and the locations less than glamorous. But, together, they form an exciting dining culture that speaks of life on the island. Drawing from the childhood memories of author Gerald Tan, Tok Tok Mee is an intimate portrayal of the people, places and practices that give Penang street food its endearing and vivid personality.

This book documents via pictorial description of the common herbs traditionally used by the Malays or even other ethnic groups in Malaysia for ages to enhance the flavor of their cooked food. The rest are usually consumed fresh as side dishes during meal time, either at home or restaurants. Many of the herbs described in this coffee table book are available in UPMs campus at Serdang. Some of them are being studied to determine their worth as traditional medicine that can be exploited for commercial production.

Kandaqstan : The Empire of Taste, The Melting Pot of Flavours / Jahabar Sadiq

$ 15.00 / HB
306gm.

IN one word, Kandaqstan brings up images of crowds and long queues patiently waiting at a stall or restaurant for a plate of steaming hot rice and a mélange of curries with meat, fish, eggs, ladies' fingers, coconut chutney and green chillies.

And it comes from Penang, from the heyday when it was a bustling free port and workers, stevedores and even top maritime officials wanted a quick meal that had the daily dose of protein and carbohydrates, with flavours that would make you eat any time of the day and night.

That meal is called Nasi Kandar: rice and dishes that were originally in pots within wicker baskets balanced on a wooden pole and brought to the gates of the 24/7 ports in George Town and Butterworth.

What is it in this meal that people rave about, lust for, travel for miles and line up for? And where are the best nasi kandar? What gets the maximum five ladies' fingers on the Kandaqstan rating system?

Pitaya, pitahaya or dragon fruit (Hylocereus spp.) is a group of desert plants native to the tropical forest regions of Mexico as well as Central and South America. This book elaborates on various pests and diseases, including some disorders commonly affect dragon fruits. Although the plants are relatively free from harmful pests and diseases in well managed fields, various pests and diseases do occur that eventually become serious in many plantations. Fungi and bacteria infecting the plants and fruits can lead to poor quality and unmarketable fruits, while slugs and snails will damage new growth. Birds and squirrels will not only feed on the fruits, but also will damage the green parts of the lower stems, leaving only the central cores. While this type of damage does not usually kill the plant, it should be prevented. Consumers, students, practicing plant pathologists, ecologists, pitaya growers will find this book as an important foundation resource.

The forested area in Selangor covers about 250,860 ha (32%) from a total of 793,020 ha of land area in the state. More than 70% of the forest areas in Selangor is considered as lowland dipterocarp forest including the mangroves and peat swamp forest areas. With the grace of his Majesty the Sultan of Selangor who is very concerned about the conservation of the environment and the well-being of his subjects, including the forest biodiversity, Selangor has become the first timber-state in Peninsular Malaysia that stops the logging activities in production forests since 2010. The importance of trees in forest ecosystem could be seen from five perspectives; their functions in the ecological processes, their values in conservation, characterization and diversity of an area, contributing major economic resources in the form of timbers, and finally, benefit to the local community, especially the indigenous communities.

Inaugural Lecture of the Darul Ehsan Public Lecture series by Professor Dr. Mohd Faiz bin Abdullah (Dean of Selangor Business School, UNISEL) delivered on 19 September 2017

In this short monograph, the author proposes to shed light on the transformation of Selangor into a regional smart state. He defines the term "Smart State" and examines the theoretical foundations of paradigm change touching on the Kuhn-Popper debate concerning falsifiability. The author contends that this discourse has been dominated by Western scholarship viewed from secular-oriented lenses. He presents his alternative perspective from the prism of Islam and revealed knowledge as articulated in his first two books, The Province of Shari'ah Determined – Fundamental Rethink of the Shari'ah and Wars of Jurisprudence – Clash between Contractual Justice and Freedom of Contract. The author discusses questions on managing strategic change, leadership and strategic management doctrines and principles. Having set the theoretical discourse, he presents some key case studies to support the contention that propelling change for the state of Selangor is neither rhetoric nor polemics but supported by facts, figures and tangible results. The author makes the case for continued support for transformational change made even more pressing by the advent of the Fourth Industrial Revolution. Good governance, accountability and transparency and social justice are posited as critical success factors for the transformation. He proposes some strategic formulations in respect of the key steps to further drive the change process and propel the transformation trajectory.

1. Accounting – Malaysia – Case studies

$ 24.00 / PB

240gm.

The overall aim of this book is to provide cases in financial accounting, auditing and management accounting issues. The cases are intended to fill a need for more Malaysian-oriented cases in the accounting discipline. Given the fact that most available cases are from Western countries, it is timely that accounting students in Malaysia are given the opportunity to be exposed to cases that are written with the context of the Malaysian financial regulatory environment. The cases are designed to expose students to current issues in Malaysia. It will enable them to apply concepts covered in their accounting courses and relate these to realistic situations in the business world. Some cases may require students to apply accounting technical skills that they have learnt in the accounting courses to solve the issues raised in these cases.

3. Internet in education
4. Distance Education

$ 21.00 / PB

208gm.

The book “Teaching Online Simplified – A Quick Guide for Instructors” intended to serve as a practical guide or “handbook” for those who have limited or no prior knowledge in teaching and/or education but are interested in online teaching. It is also intended for:

- • open university staff and lecturers who needs to teach online;lecturers who teach (or are planning to teach) online courses in higher education settings;
- • lecturers who are interested to use technologies to support face-to-face teaching; and
- • faculty professional development workshops and trainings.

The book is written based on the authors’ research-based experiences in consulting online instructors on what they needed and wanted to know about designing online courses. Authors also interviewed a group of online students to understand what they liked and disliked about the way their current courses were conducted, and what kind of improvements they wanted their online programs to include. Hence, this book focusing on the “how” and “whys”, rather than theoretical discussions of teaching online.

This book is a much-have resource for anyone involved in teaching online as it such as faculty members who want to convert his or her in-class course to an online format, and who are not necessarily familiar with current literature and/or do not have time to get acquainted with online teaching as it translates research-based knowledge in online education into simple strategies that can be easily adopted by teachers-practitioners.

The old masters knew the ways to powerful, mind-bending speeches and this book exposes their mysteries through Marcus Tullius Cicero's 5 canons of rhetoric. The Secret Chambers of Rhetoric explains the method to locate speech topics, craft eloquent arguments, and develop logical speech structures. It will also illustrate how a speaker can engender a hypnotic voice and fearless body language.

The clandestine knowledge of rhetoric is uncovered through the analysis of modern speeches made by Barack Obama, Julia Gillard and even someone as unlikely as Hitler. This book will guide the reader through the historical vaults of public speaking and help them build an unassailable foundation in the art of persuasion.

Using common drugs without proper knowledge can be dangerous, as herbs and vitamins contain ingredients that may interact with common drugs. Also, questions such as “Can medicines be shared among family members?”, “Can antibiotics be kept for the next infection?”, “What is the best time to take medicine?”, “What is actually meant by ‘before’ and ‘after’ food?”, “Can drugs be taken with herbal medications?”, “Can tablets be taken with hot water or coffee?”, “What is the maximum dose of paracetamol per day?” and “Will paracetamol interact with durian or alcohol?” may seem trivial but are important. Written in an easily understood Q&A format, TIPS ON USING COMMON MEDICINES SAFELY provides information on how to maximise the use of common medicines while minimising the impact of their side effects. It also gives concise information on how to avoid harmful interactions with other drugs, food, herbs and vitamins.

This is the tale of one person who discovered his purpose for living, and lived it to the full. The story of Datuk Dr. Jagjit Singh Sambhi, Scholar, Doctor, Gynaecologist and Obstetrician, Family man, Philanthropist, and Humanist.

Jagjit Singh Sambhi came into this world a premature baby, not expected to survive beyond a few hours let alone days, given his condition and the state of medical care in the 1930s. Such was his indomitable spirit, he lived on to taste life unconditionally and fulfil his destiny.

As a 'Doctor on the Move', he placed a premium on service to Mankind. He gave generously of his time, talents and expertise to all his patients, even when the first patient to his newly-opened Sambhi Clinic for Women was a Man!

Datuk Dr. Sambhi lives the life of a global citizen, assimilating and commemorating different cultures, whilst always maintaining strong family bonds and cultivating life-long friendships. He knows when to celebrate life and how to face adversity, when to mount a challenge or stand up for his principles and how to let go.

'Doctor on the Move - Life's Journey' explores the era of Malaya in the 1930s, the Second World War, the Communist insurrection, the birth of a Nation, life in 1960s UK & Europe, the modern times; Specialist & Hospital medicine in the Public and Private Sectors, pioneering Medical Service in England, Brunei, Sarawak and the Peninsula; Charitable endeavours; Fine Dining; Holidaying around the World; and... well, life as a 'Sambhi'!

This book records remarkable eclectic anecdotes: the Surgical removal of the largest tumour in Malaysia, the delivery rituals of the indigenous tribes of Sarawak, the 'Pantangs' or traditions at birth of Malaysia's different races; how it feels to travel 1,200 feet into the Earth; discover the secret machinations of this country's first Tripartisan leaders, and perhaps previously untold tale of their clandestine meetings!

'Life's Journey' is a tribute to revering and fulfilling one's purpose. It is a homage to a life well lived, to Datuk Dr. Jagjit Singh Sambhi's existence on the Earth.

Jack Ma is the Founder and CEO of the Alibaba Group, a privately owned internet-based e-commerce company in China whose sales are estimate to be bigger than its American competitors ebay and amazon combined. This book unveils Jack Ma's thousand faces in real life from different angles and it reveals a Jack Ma perhaps different from what you may have imagined. "Witty Jack Ma", "Cheerful Jack Ma", "Playful Jack Ma" and "Arrogant Jack Ma".

It's not just a book, but more like a movie from which you can gain an insight into ma and understand Alibaba through sounds, colours and expressions, among many other elements. There are no tedious doctrines, only amusing details; no inscrutable theories, only popular, hearty statements. Through day-to-day trivial matters, the author makes an account of the "pleasant" side of jack ma, which may surprise and inspire you so you may think: well, I never! Jack Ma is such a down to earth person, so sensible yet so feeling.

"The unexamined life is not worth living," declared Socrates. In this collective journal, The Chronicler, Koh Chye Hock opens the window to his mind and distils for the reader what he believes constitutes a purposeful, meaningful life, based on his 35 years of observing his own life as well as those of others. Succinct, perspicuous and provocative, the rich array of aphorisms—on life's valleys, plains and highlands—will have you thinking about, contemplating and envisioning your own life, and what it could potentially be. The reader will also be captivated by the life of Chye, who grew up an orphan in the quiet town of Ipoh in Malaysia to become a successful corporate lawyer in a multinational firm. Live an examined life. The Chronicler will unquestionably evoke your innermost voice, one that yearns for the profoundest human essence.

Beautiful music, born from an eclectic mix of cultures, was created in Malaya in the period leading up to country's independence in 1957. But this cultural history has yet to be told now. Saidah Rastam draws in extensive interviews with those who made that history, corroborating and elaborating this testimony by trawling songs and scores films. As a point of entry into this fascinating story, she explores the controversies surrounding the provenance of Malaysia's national anthem, 'Negara Ku', and embroiders a kind of detective story, drawing the reader into broader, contextual issues to do with culture, politics and society. The result is an innovative and perceptive account: well researched, splendidly constructed, deeply knowledgeable, beautifully illustrated and stylishly written in a way that captures the very musicality of its topic. The first edition of Rosalie and Other Love Songs was enthusiastically received, and this new, revised edition will be welcomed by all those with an interest in Malaysian culture and history, as well as fans of popular music worldwide.

In the early 90's, the Malaysian underground music scene simmered under the shiny exterior of the mainstream juggernaut. Rock kapak ruled the charts, while pop powerhouses remained pillars of the predominantly Malay industry.

But a revolution was inevitable. Underground bands, fired up by the global phenomenon known as 'alternative', would rise above the indifference and disdain to build a dynamic and meaningful scene. Uniting the different subgenres of punk, metal and indie pop under one roof; a movement emerged to reflect the zeitgeist of a generation.

And they did it their way; from the fiery gigs to the idealistic fanzines, to the hundreds, if not thousands of demo tapes that passed through eager hands. The Do-It-Yourself (DIY) spirit kept these bands and activists hungry and motivated.

Then came a totally unexpected breakthrough. Four young boys in KL calling themselves Old Automatic Garbage (OAG), released a debut album in English boasting their own brand of '60's crunchy pop fuzz'.

Led by the hit song, '60's TV', the album made the mainstream audience sit up and take notice. Produced by a new label in town called Positive Tone, OAG would defy the odds and earn both commercial and critical success. This is a book about how it all came together. And then some ...

Religious fanaticism, race and a newly emergent nationalism from a potent backdrop to this gripping, real-life drama about the two women who fought for the custody of a 13 year old girl in the post-war colony of Singapore. As a proxy battle between East and West, the grim tale recounted in this book has its fair share of prejudice and mob violence. The tumultuous events that accompanied the legal battle shook the British Colonial Government to its very foundations. Much could be said about the innocent people who lost their lives in the violence that followed the controversial court decision. But Maria Hertogh, or Nadra as the Muslims called her, was probably the saddest victim. Caught between two worlds she did not completely understand, the effect of the uproar on the child at her most impressionable age was something few of us will have to endure. The author recounts the tragic affair with grace and simplicity, drawing upon exhaustive research in both Singapore and Holland. Today, more than 60 years after it faded into history, the story provides us with a timely reminder of how easily the very fabric of a society can be ripped apart by the unwise handling of sensitive issues.

Law

Recoverability of Economic Loss in Malaysia / Seow Hock Peng

1. Malaysia – Economic conditions

$ 31.00 / PB

The recoverability of economic loss in Malaysia is still an unsettled area of the law. Economic loss has generally not been recoverable in Malaysia. The concept of pure economic loss draws its origin from English law. Even then, the English common law decisions on pure economic loss – for the past sixty years or so – have been swaying from one end of the equilibrium to the other. The English law established a general principle, the neighbour principle, for determining when a duty of care exists. It imposed a duty of care on manufacturers not to cause personal injury or physical damage to property through defects in their manufactured chattels. However, any defect in the chattel is considered pure economic loss and has traditionally not been recoverable in tort. It is as consequence of the defect in it, the chattel inflicts injury on a person or causes damage to property other than itself, the manufacturer would be liable in negligence. The position in Malaysia appears to be no different. This book will analyze the nature, history, concept and development of pure economic loss; and the development on pure economic loss in England, Malaysia and other Commonwealth jurisdiction. The study will then consider the correct jurisprudential approach on the recoverability of economic loss in Malaysia; whether it is recoverable or not; and whether it should be recoverable or not. This book is hoped to be able to assist local lawyers specializing in construction torts to be able to argue their cases successfully and to provide the Malaysian judiciary a legal framework to chart its future jurisprudential approach in the recovery of pure economic loss.

The theme for the 2018 D.K. Dutt Award for Literary Excellence was knowledge and education and Bitter Root Sweet Fruit pulls together the best stories submitted for the competition and includes the winning entry by Bathmaloshanee M., and stories by runners-up Ling Low and Sumitra Selvaraj.

Here are stories about teachers, sometimes wise and caring, but more often deeply flawed and of young people struggling to obtain an education against the odds. Whether it is learning to make the perfect chicken curry or coming to terms with important life truths these Malaysian writers, both new and established, share stories that are fresh and inventive.

A dock brief pupil gains an uncomfortable insight into how the poor are disadvantaged in the legal system; a young man learns how to become a confidence trickster; and a small boy goes on a cosmic journey to learn the answer to his question about a Hindu deity. Elsewhere a mother teaches her child in an underground bunker; a medical student struggles to acquire the manual dexterity she needs to become a doctor; and a speech therapist longs to reach out to a handicapped boy kept locked in a shed by his parents.

The book celebrates the life of D K Dutt who was himself a passionate teacher.

These short stories fictionally captures some of the eccentricities that the author has found among overseas Indians. From Abdul Kader Ghoriawalla of Namdipur, who exorcises a ghost from a white residence in apartheid South Africa, thus presenting the authorities with an intractable conundrum, and Mukund, the Indian businessman who tries to bribe a petty immigration official in an imaginary African republic in the post-independence era to obtain a work permit, to Sam, the consultant on diasporic reassignment who advises newcomers on how to survive in Canada, and to Farid, an effective networker, whose handwritten letters unwittingly open doors to people he had never met in Central Asia, we gain an insight into the Indian migrants' journey towards acculturation in their new countries in the 20th century.

A great storyteller. His characters speak to all segment of the Indian diaspora wherever they live today. A fun read!

In a sleazy back alley of Kuala Lumpur, the body of a young woman is found. She was killed in a sadistic manner and her features erased beyond recognition.

Inspector Mislán Latif and Detective Sergeant Johan Kamaruddin of Special Investigations (D9) take the case. What puzzles them is that no one had lodged a missing-persons report, so the young woman is not only faceless but completely unknown.

An autopsy by Dr. Safia reveals a mysterious object lodged in the victim's stomach. Had she been killed as a result of a theft gone wrong? If so, why the need to erase any trace she ever existed?

Becoming increasingly troubled by the case, Mislán and Johan make a trip across the border and uncover a sinister network that serves some very well-connected individuals—people who will now stop at nothing to keep their inhuman activities a secret.

JIT MURAD PLAYS is the much-anticipated anthology of works for the stage by Jit Murad, described by the late theatre doyen, Dato' Krishen Jit, as Malaysia's 'contemporary penglipur lara, the teller of tales about our social and personal manners here and now, and the soother of our neuroses'.

Jit Murad is considered to be one of Southeast Asia's finest – and funniest – playwrights. His plays have a distinctive wit, warmth and originality. This collection includes some of the playwright's favourites: Gold Rain & Hailstones, Visits, The Storyteller, Malam Konsert, and Spilt Gravy on Rice. The latter won four Boh Cameronian arts awards and has been made into a film, directed by Dato' Zahim Albakri.

The anthology also contains notes by the playwright and directors, as well as reviews and photos that illustrate how the writing formed part of an innovative and exciting period of development in Malaysian theatre. An insightful essay by widely respected theatre scholar, Dr Susan Philip, also sheds light on the themes and value of Jit's work.

Never hate yourself. Stop saying you're not beautiful, it's like you're saying that God's creations are hideous. If you are beautiful inside, no doubt your outside will shine. It just takes the right person to see it. - ARINA Paracosm is an anthology of prose and poetry by a young gifted writer, known simply as Arina. It is a collection of works she has meticulously penned over her last few years at a premier boarding school for girls, the Tunku Kurshiah College in Seremban, Negri Sembilan. Her poems beg to be read with love and understanding. For some, her poems are reminiscent of the Cambodian award winning author, Lang Leav in style and themes. Lang Leav was born in a Thai Refugee Camp after her parents escaped from the brutality of the Khmer Rouge regime and subsequently migrated to Australia. Lang Leav's work has been described as "between the whimsical and the woeful, expressing a complexity beneath its childlike façade." Arina does not share a devastating past. Brought up in the material comfort of an upper middle class home, with parents and grandparents as lawyers, she describes an inner struggle to find her true self against that which her parents and society have moulded for her. Thus, the unveiling of Paracosm is timely towards Arina's hope not only to follow the footsteps of her parents and serve humankind as a human rights lawyer but at the same time carve a niche for herself in the literary world that beckons an enthusiastic and prolific writer that she promises to be.

Studies on the pantun in English is often a rare commodity. While the passion for the verse form is exuberant, studying it has not been a popular endeavour. This book is a first full introduction to this extremely popular Southeast Asian poetic form that has found its way into many literatures of Europe and Australia and now into the cyber spaces, recreating itself within the demands of the new technology.

In the Malay Archipelago itself it is the well-loved medium of love relationships, customary laws, proverbs, lullabies and oral and written narratives. No other form has been able to execute these many functions and still retain such a freshness and flexibility.

In this study Prof Muhammad introduces the various presences of the pantun, its functions, its different stages of development and spread, and not least is magical aesthetics.

Essays Celebrating the 50th Anniversary of ASEAN

This book is the outcome of discussions that took place at a meeting in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, in February 2016. The meeting, with the theme "ASEAN's Next 50 Years: ASEAN's Future in a Rapidly Changing World", gathered some 50 senior, influential and upcoming thought leaders from ASEAN Member States and Dialogue Partner countries to cast a long view on ASEAN into the next 50 years. Throughout the book, several important themes emerge for the future. These include the changing roles of superpowers and their impact on Southeast Asia; the amplified prospect of traditional and non-traditional security threats in the region; the implications of trade protectionism and disruptive technology on a region that thrives on economic cooperation; the sustainability of the region's development; frustration at ASEAN's inability to evolve beyond its traditional principles at a satisfactory pace; and a heightening level of social consciousness warranting wider people participation in the greater ASEAN project. Featuring over 30 authors, this publication consists of 10 chapters.

Autocrats vs The People : Authoritarian Populism in Malaysia / Anne

Anne's 1993 PhD thesis, 'Authoritarian Populism in Malaysia', published in 1996 by Macmillan was ahead of its time in its theoretical and political conceptualization of this current world-wide phenomenon. She has updated her thesis as a reminder of this Malaysian variant of authoritarian populism and its consequences. Apart from the toxic effects of populism on ethnic relations, authoritarianism has cost the country billions through financial scandals including the current 1MDB losses. Clearly, good governance and populism cannot coexist.

This book demonstrates how populism in Malaysia is long established and has been sustained ever since the New Economic Policy that came into force in the post-May 13, 1969 period. The Malaysian variant is a populism that is based on a call for ethnic entitlement ('Bumiputeraism') and one that has become increasingly Islamic in recent years. Anne's thesis also contains one of the most thorough expositions of the politics surrounding detention without trial and other repressive laws in Malaysia.

History professor, consumer advocate, policy analyst and public intellectual par excellence Dr Lim Teck Ghee has put together this important collection of critical essays on the existential crisis of the Malaysian nation today. Through these essays, Dr Lim systematically exposes the poor state of governance in the Malaysian state and the flaws of its past and current policies. His pointed analyses of how and why we must change ineffectual and moribund policies is essential reading for academicians, politicians and activists. - Johan Saravanamuttu, Adjunct Senior Fellow, S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies (RSIS), Singapore. The life time spent by Dr Li Teck Ghee on studying and analyzing issues affecting the well-being of Malaysia and the world is exhibited an impressive fashion in this collection of articles. Often controversial, always informed, his incisive words confirm his standing as one of the country's most intrepid and resolute public intellectuals. - Ooi Kee Beng, Executive Director, Penang Institute

It should be remembered that writing about Al-Turabi's work on Qur'anic exegesis is both a great academic challenge and a sense of adventure. Because of this, Dr. Eltigani was careful enough not to be carried away by the current political context. Though the focus of this study is on the ideological aspect of Al-Turabi's Qur'anic exegetical work, yet the line of the main argument maintained a high degree of academic rigour.

Obviously Al-Turabi is the main living ideologue of the international Islamic movement. More to the point, his influence and political ijtihad cut across traditional political boundaries in the Muslim World.

Generally speaking Al-Turabi's Tafsir is a brilliant piece of writing. It mirrors the passionate and rational eloquence of the Qur'an. In this regard, writing about his Qur'anic exegesis will, certainly, require an understanding of the complexity of the hermeneutic strategy followed by him. The movement from the general guidance of the Surah (Tartil al Ma'ani) and finally to the relevancy of the Surah through its general meaning ('Umum al-Ma'ani) is the hallmark of this Tafsir. For this reason, this book is relevant to both general readership and specialist. Most important of all, it is a quiet read in the noisy affairs of the Arab spring.

Fazlur Rahman was one of the most influential Muslim thinkers of the 20th Century. His encyclopedic understanding of both the Islamic and Western traditions rendered him as most suited for the task of tajdid ul-din (intellectual and academic revivification, reformism and modernism). As a pragmatist he believed that 'social change' could not be translated into reality without an active, positive and vital engagement with the present world which stood as the élan of Islamic morality and ethics. The present work attempts to critically analyze and deconstruct Fazlur Rahman's thought in order to ascertain the key principles that govern the oeuvre of his work. Further, the author has provided a 'bridge' to facilitate an empathetic introduction to Fazlur Rahman's life, person and thought which are essential for understanding him and his work. Also, the prejudice he faced from the orthodox ulama' and political Islam activists in Pakistan foreshowed a biased misrepresentation of his work qua Orientalism and Western Imperialist agenda.

As a representative of modern Islam it seems plausible that serious attention must be given to 'reconstruct' kalām whilst standing in the midst of Western theology in a postmodern time and kalām in its post-medieval phase. Thus, Fazlur Rahman was not simply a falsafi which the majority hold him to be but also a mutakallim in the full-blooded sense

This book contains eleven articles by lecturers from the Kulliyah of Islamic Revealed Knowledge and Human Science,s International Islamic University Malaysia (IIUM). For those not familiar with the University's nomenclature, "Kulliyah" is an Arabic word that means "college" or "faculty." The Kulliyah of Islamic Revealed Knowledge and Human Science is the largest faculty in the University, comprising eleven departments - four in Islamic Revealed Knowledge (or Islamic Studies) and seven in Human Sciences (or Humanities and Social Sciences). One might wonder why so many departments and with such diverse interests have been clustered into a single faculty in a traditional university, obviously Islamic studies would form a faculty by itself, while Humanities and Social studies would either be combined or given separate academic and administrative identities. But the founders of International Islamic University Malaysia defined this institution with one overarching tenet in mind: 'Islam.'

Whenever the idealistic among us speak about a better Malaysia, we tend to focus on the thing that unite us: the food, the festivals, the cultural experiences that bind us together in a shared national fabric, ignoring the yawning gaps that weaken the weave and keep us from achieving lofty visions of development and progress. Straits Eclectic is a collection of essays by young Malaysians who stare straight into the void and attempt to understand the divides that exist between us, whatever East and West Malaysian and the rest of the world, between East and West Malaysians, between Malays and Chinese and Indians and Dan Lain Lain, between religion and culture, between past and present, between the person you were when you left and the person you had become by the time you returned.

If we don't stop to talk to the old man we see sitting quietly by the side of the road, how would we know that he used to serve in the Malaysian Armed Forces?

If we ignore the young Indonesian woman who's walking aimlessly around town, how would we know that she was tricked into entering the country and has nowhere to go?

If we never try to chat with the man who rests under the stars, lying down on a flattened cardboard box and hugging onto his bag tightly, how would we know that he has simply made a choice, and why?

There is a story behind each face. If only we would sit down and listen.

In this book are some of those stories. Stories that will show you how different and alike we all are. Stories that roam the streets of KL, waiting to be discovered by us.

This book explores the migration processes and experiences of female labour migrants from Indonesia to Malaysia's manufacturing sector. Their stories depict labour migration as a process shaped by the intersection of external, structural forces and individual desires and motivations. Labour migration was valued and evaluated as an "investment", one that was calculated not only in terms of financial security but also in relation to personal rewards and experiences unavailable to them at home. These labour migrants negotiated a number of externally imposed demands and conditions, ranging from migration regulations, the challenges of settlement in a new city, factory floor relations, and the negative stereotypes attached to female Indonesian migrant workers in Malaysia. Such constraints did not simply result in their sense of victimisation, as the interviews revealed the women's capacity to resist, negotiate and comply with such factors. The book distinguishes between two groups of migrants: inexperienced, first-time migrants and experienced repeat migrants. There are significant differences between first-timers' and repeat migrants' understanding and management transnational labour migration.

Needing a break from her first book, I Am Muslim, Dina Zaman embarked on a two-year journey around Malaysia - the length of the peninsula as well as Sabah and Sarawak. She met people of many faiths. And from these encounters she has woven together a tapestry of vital stories: of nuns and shamans, of silat practitioners who she inadvertently offended, of pilgrims and ustaz, of hijabis who pole dance, and she ended up in Memali to discover that tragic tale. This collection of essays - animated, engaging and provocative - opens a window on the sometimes troubled terrain of religious beliefs and practices. The accounts are personal and intimate, and at the same time throw light on some of the most pressing issues that confront society today: mindfulness and worldliness, interfaith relations and lifestyle choices, class and conviction, identity and religiosity.
