In other words, children are being provided early childhood education on computers also. In addition, the new trend of "digital classrooms" is taking over the education system wherein students are shown video lessons by which they take in information in an easier way. Parents these days prefer sending their children to schools with better computer equipment. Apart from schools, universities and colleges also use computers. And undergraduate students prefer computers the most, I believe. From completing assignments to studying to submitting papers, students are dependent on their PCs. However, with the provision of the right learning environment and guidance, we can reduce the misuse of computers to some extent.
