Landscape Design A Cultural and Architectural History

Landscape Architecture History : we have always wanted our surroundings to be beautiful and this extends to the outdoors of our home as well as the interior. The practice of shaping nature around our dwellings to suit personal preference goes back centuries and many of the landscape designs that were commissioned long ago still remain with us today as tourist attractions. Different cultures also have different points when they considered landscape design to be important-building elaborate and beautiful sanctuaries has always been an important part of Japanese life, while this same importance has only recently been placed on Western equivalents. ESALA is one of very few schools, internationally, to connect teaching, research and practice in Architecture and Landscape Architecture. Our professional programmes are accredited by the Royal Institute of Architects (RIBA), Architects Registration Board (ARB) and the Landscape Institute. We are the largest centre for the study of Architectural History in the UK and a centre of excellence in Digital Media and Design. Our students can take courses from across the University of Edinburgh and we work closely with Heriot-Watt University, including on world-leading research. People have shaped the landscape around them since prehistoric times, creating places as diverse in form and meaning as Stonehenge, the Forbidden City of Beijing, Versailles, and New York's Central Park. Overflowing with hundreds of plans, drawings, and photographs, many created specially for this book, this engrossing volume spans the history of landscape design and reveals a great deal about the development of societies, and how cities, parks, and gardens embody cultural values. Examining famous and lesser-known sites, some now vanished, this comprehensive survey leads the reader from an
