ATROCITIES: THE 100 DEADLIEST EPISODES IN HUMAN HISTORY provides a blunt view at mankind's destructive ways from the Second Persian War (480 BC) to the Second Congo War (2002). Between these two bookends are a multitude of wars, genocides, rebellions, crusades, revolts and general acts/missions of deadly cruelty that consumed hundreds of millions of lives. As astonishing as the sheer number of deaths are, even more astonishing is that author Matthew White only details and ranks (by death toll) the 100 deadliest events. I read this book a few years ago under its original title of The Great Big Book of Horrible Things. I'm re-reading it now because it's oddly comforting to see how bad things have been in ages past. The Great Big Book of Horrible Things: The Definitive Chronicle of History's 100 Worst Atrocities. Matthew White. ISBN: 13: 978-0393081923. Reaching back to 480 BCE's second Persian War, White moves chronologically through history to this century's war in the Congo and devotes chapters to each event, where he surrounds hard facts (time and place) and succinct takeaways (who usually gets the blame?) with lively military, social, and political histories. By turns droll, insightful, matter-of-fact, and ultimately sympathetic to those who died, The Great Big Book of Horrible Things gives readers a chance to reach their own conclusions while offering a stark reminder of the darkness of the human heart. 20 black-and-white illustrations and 4 maps. 15 June 2019 (06:58). Post a Review.

Rather than accept this book as the final say on anything, I would use it as a good starting point for further research, and a good summary of the generally accepted mainstream viewpoint of the events listed. I found one small error of fact in the chapter on the Mahdi Rebellion (the British officer who converted to Islam was von Slatin, not Hicks Pasha, who I don't think was ever a convert). I read this book a few years ago under its original title of The Great Big Book of Horrible Things. Ranking History's Atrocities by Counting the Corpses. By Jennifer Schuessler. Nov. 8, 2011. With its stylishly lurid graphics and goofy asides, "The Great Big Book of Horrible Things: The Definitive Chronicle of History's 100 Worst Atrocities" may seem more like an aspiring classic of macabre bathroom reading than a serious effort. But Mr. White's book, published this week by W. W. Norton, arrives trailing some impressive scholarly affirmation, including a ringing foreword from the Harvard psychologist Steven Pinker. If coldbloodedly ranking body counts seems like an odd business, Mr. White, a bearlike man of 54 with a shy laugh and incipient Santa Claus beard, is an even odder perso

The Great Big Book of Horrible Things: The Definitive Chronicle of History's 100 Worst Atrocities is a popular history book by Matthew White, an independent scholar and self-described atrocitologist. The book provides a ranking of the hundred worst atrocities of mankind based on the number of deaths. Matthew White, a self-described atrocitologist and a librarian at the federal courthouse in Richmond, Virginia, wrote the book in 2011. He compiled his list of hundred worst atrocities without any degree

Shelves: history. The first thing you need to know about The Great Big Book of Horrible things is, you're going to not only learn things, but you'll at times be embarrassed about the things you know almost nothing about. The worst genocide since the Holocaust occurred in Bangladesh in 1971? The bloodiest war since WWII, the Second Congo War, ended less than ten years ago, and nobody in the United States noticed?Â "Despite my skepticism about any common thread running through all one hundred atrocities, I still found some interesting tendencies. Let me share with you the three biggest lessons I learned while working on this list: "1. Chaos is deadlier than tyranny. More of these multicides result from the break-down of authority rather than the exercise of authority.
