San Francisco is Burning is an almost documentary view of the 1906 earthquake and the conflagrations that followed. Dennis Smith uses a little creative license to describe what people felt and thought during the ground shaking and the moments and hours that followed. Although he uses creative license most of his material comes from exhaustive research of historical documents. He used firsthand accounts to paint his picture of the events. He also uses his experience to add flavor and interest to the story. The night before the earthquake there was a warehouse fire. Dennis Smith describes the fi...
