For truly agile performance management, companies with an agile operating model need to adapt three traditional practices.Â Performance management is tough enough in traditional organizations; in agile organizations, three changes are essential to success. The evidence is clear: a small number of priority practices make the difference between an effective and fair performance-management approach and one that falls short. Organizations that link employee goals to business priorities, invest in managersâ€™ capabilities, and differentiate rewards for the extremes of performance are 84 percent more likely to have performance-management approaches that their employees perceive and recognize as being fair.
