Share this Rating. Title: Napoleon auf St. Helena (1929). 6,4/10. Want to share IMDb's rating on your own site?Â This German count could say that in some ways, "Napoleon auf St. Helena" is also a kind of late "Kammerspiele" film, not for the decors certainly which are usually sparse and unique in that special German film genre , but due to the psychological study. The film focuses on Herr Napoleon (Herr Werner Krauss) and his rival, the evil governor Hudson Lowe (performed excellently by Herr Albert Bassermann), contradictory human portraits that shows the solitude, despair and hatred among those two strong characters. Napoleon at Saint Helena (German: Napoleon auf Sankt Helena) is a 1929 German silent historical film directed by Lupu Pick and starring Werner Krauss, Hanna Ralph and Albert Bassermann. The film depicts the final years of Napoleon between 1815 and 1821 during his period of exile on the British Atlantic island of Saint Helena following his defeat at Waterloo. Werner Krauss as Napoleon. Hanna Ralph as Madame Bertrand. Albert Bassermann as Hudson Lowe - Gouverneur von St. Helena. St. Helena had a healthful climate, and Napoleon's food was good, carefully prepared, and plentiful. His inactivity undoubtedly contributed to the deterioration of his health. The man who for 20 years had played so great a role in the world and who had marched north, south, east, and west across Europe could hardly be expected to endure the monotony of existence on a little island, aggravated by the self-imposed life of a recluse.Â Nor did he have any news of his son, the former king of Rome, who was now living in Vienna with the title of duke of Reichstadt. Though the severity of Sir Hudson Lowe has been much exaggerated, it is certain that this "jailer," who arrived as governor of St. Helena in April 1816, did nothing to make Napoleon's life easier.
