Paul Kay. Brent Berlin. University of California, Berkeley. University of Georgia. (DRAFT of 960822). Introduction: Observation and Inference in Basic Color Terms In 1969, we published a short monograph (Berlin and Kay 1969; hereafter BCT). advancing two broad hypotheses: (1) there are semantic constraints on the basic color lexicons of the world's languages and (2) basic color lexicons grow in a constrained fashion.Â investigating color naming cross-linguistically, it is worth noticing that both the stimuli and. almost all of the procedures used by Berlin and Kay and their associates were taken directly. from the classic study of Lenneberg and Roberts (1956, hereafter LR) (see also BL).
