In Divided Houses, Caroline Ford examines how the so-called feminization of religion in France from the French Revolution to the First World War contributed to the formation of a distinctive secular (laïc) republican political culture in France. She also reveals the effect of women's close association with religion on their civil and social status, which gave rise in France to heated debates about the limits of female agency, women's property rights, and women's role in the family and in society. She argues that religious women were often far more than the passive instruments of... She is the author of Creating the Nation in Provincial France: Religion and Political Identity in Brittany. Defenestration as Ritual Punishment: Windows, Power, and Political Culture in Early Modern Europe. An Identity of Opinion: Historians and July 1914.
