Britain's shipbuilding legacy. Glasgow, United Kingdom Stefan Wermuth. Updated 27 Feb 2014 20 images. Yet while British shipbuilding has drawn down over many decades, its legacy continues. 16 Jan 2014. Glasgow, United Kingdom. Britain did not become a part of the Empire until another man needed a military victory to shore up his power – Claudius sent Aulus Plautius to subdue Britain for him. The Romans also gave Britain a new diet. “Their main legacy is in the foods they introduced and cultivated here,” says Jenny Hall. “They introduced such things as carrots, cucumbers, plums, cherries and better varieties of apples and pears, which have remained staple parts of the British diet.” Roman re-enactors.
