Celebrated on August 26th in the US, it commemorates the 19th Amendment to the United States Constitution, granting women the right to vote. So many of the social life's aspects have changed for women in the years. Starting with the right for education and ending with gender equality - all of this didn't happen overnight, and many badass women had to sacrifice their personal lives for a greater cause. Women's Equality Day celebrated on August 26th in the US, commemorates the 19th Amendment to the United States Constitution, granting women the right to vote. It was certified in 1920, despite being introduced many years earlier in 1878, and since 1972, every president has published a proclamation for Women's Equality Day. 3. Harriet Tubman, American abolitionist and armed spy for the Union Army during the American Civil War. One woman whose name you will probably have heard many times over the last couple of years is Hillary Clinton. That's because she made history back in July 2016 when she became the first woman from one of America's two main political parties to be chosen to run for the job of president. She was representing the Democrats - the same party as the president at the time, Barack Obama. We suspect we don't need to tell you how this woman has changed the world. Through her books, author Joanne Kathleen Rowling (JK Rowling) brought the world one of the most-loved and most famous literary characters ever. We are of course talking about a certain Harry Potter.
