A good thesis requires a lot of meticulous work. Often, the requirements for writing your dissertation/thesis will be dictated by your university. Regardless, every thesis should detail a methodical approach to answering a research question. When publishing articles based on your thesis, citing the dissertation is a good practice. The definition of "thesis" and "dissertation" depends on where you are. In Europe, a thesis is typically associated with a PhD and describes original research. You should also discuss the novelty of your findings. Turning Thesis to a Journal Article. While both contain similar sections, you cannot simply publish your thesis as a research article. Converting it into a journal article has many steps. It is important to recognize that an article is much shorter than the thesis. A thesis or dissertation is a document submitted in support of candidature for an academic degree or professional qualification presenting the author's research and findings. In some contexts, the word "thesis" or a cognate is used for part of a bachelor's or master's course, while "dissertation" is normally applied to a doctorate, while in other contexts, the reverse is true. The term graduate thesis is sometimes used to refer to both master's theses and doctoral dissertations.
