Recognize that sometimes, crowded places are unavoidable. Sometimes, you'll be taken aback by a crowded place, with no warning that there was going to be a crowd at all. Make sure the quiet place is actually located in a quiet area, has plenty of things for you to mess around with while you calm down, and is easily accessible - you shouldn't have to be forcing yourself under your desk if you can't fit there. If you go to school and the school administration won't allow you to make a quiet spot, point out that the spot could be used for other students who need it (e.g. other students who are also frightened by crowds, disabled students, etc.). Community Answer.

Overcrowded places can cause some people serious anxiety. Begin Your Kindergarten Year with 10 Memorable Traditions. Life in a Crowded Place: Making a Learning Community. Read it. Begin Your Kindergarten Year with 10 Memorable Traditions. Great sorting activity for students to go through to learn and review bathroom behavior procedures at the beginning of the year. These sorts are also a great review coming back from a break, or anytime during the year as a refresher if needed! Perfect for helping enforce your classroom management. No one will deny that life in classrooms is an intense social experience. Crowded together with students for six or more hours a day in a space no bigger than a large living room, the immediate response of most teachers is to maintain control and enforce specifications.
