By William Flint Thrall, Addison Hibbard. The literary history of the past hundred and fifty years has been undergoing a series of major re-assessments, and it has been necessary to re-adjust historical articles to fit these changes. In the literary history of the older periods, new attitudes and significant new facts have appeared since the writing of the Handbook, and some of these needed to be communicated to the inquiring student. Some movements and schools that looked very important in the mid-1930's have lessened greatly in significance, and statements about them needed modification. HANDBOOK TO LITERATURE page 3. Outline of literary history, english and american. page 561. Appendices; winners of major literary prizes and awards. page 629. vii. HANDBOOK TO Literature. A. Abbey Theatre; The name generally associated with the drama of The Irish Literary Revival. The company was an outgrowth of an earlier group, the Irish Literary Theatre, founded in 1899, which became the Irish National Theatre Society in 1902. In 1904, on a subsidy from Mrs. A. E. F. Horniman, the company moved to the Abbey Theatre in Dublin, from which it took its name. It continued, producing plays of a markedly national emphasis, until the theater burned in 1951. W. B. Yeats was director of the Abbey Theatre until his death in 1939.
