Contemporary sociological theory retains traces of each these traditions and they are by no means mutually exclusive. Structural functionalism[edit]. Main article: Structural functionalism. The conflict theory is a way for people to explain scientifically why conflict arises in a society. Conflict theorists look at how conflict in society arises, is resolved and how every conflict is different. Conflict theorists explain that the reasons conflict arises in societies are because there is not enough resources and power and there is an unequal balance for these things, resulting in people fighting over them. Most conflict theorists don't have the same ideas of what the resources people fight over include, but most look at it the same way Max Weber did.
