A declining employment rate or at-work rate of fathers would indicate that an increasing number of men takes over the care responsibilities in families and stays at home. The indicator on at-work rates is an additional indicator to the employment rates of both sexes. Formula. International agreements and conventionsÂ By comparing the different rates, inferences about the employment situation of parents of young children and the differing consequences for women and men can be examined. Besides directly comparing the different employment rates and at-work rates, also the difference in percentage points between mothers, respectively fathers with the whole age group of women, respectively men can provide an informative measure for the effect of parenthood.
